The new motion capture is used to enhance the video-game realism in five key areas: animation, player movement, ball movement, ball control and AI. The new motion capture system is used to enhance the realism of FIFA 22 player movement. Player movement data collected from live action is used to create the moves and animations of real-life players. The new motion capture technique captures the movements of 22 players and incorporates them into FIFA's refined Player Control System (PCS) and new Ball Control System. This allows for full body movement for more realistic player animation. New Player Evolution models in FIFA 22's new Player Controls system use the real-life player movement from the match to add more realistic player movement. For example, a player who uses a physical vertical pass to get on the end of a lofted pass, will have a precise weight transfer from front foot to back foot to add greater realism to the move. FIFA 22 introduces several new grappling animations, including head clashes, more classic tackles from the top and bottom, and the ability to launch attacks from the ground. In addition, players react with a new contextual animation to the ball spinning in the air from a kick off, free kicks and throw-ins. FIFA 22 also adds an array of new contextual animations, with each animation conveying the player's style of tackling (physical or head-first tackle), a warning to the opponent of intent to attack, and the distance and timing of a throw-in. Each style of player tackling has a unique set of interactions. The style of tackling will also affect which opponent a player tackles, which tackles to use when breaking from a tackle, and whether that tackle is more successful if it hits the player's leg or the player's head. FIFA's contextual animations have been reworked in a number of significant ways. While these new animations are more dynamic and effective, they are also easier to learn and have improved accessibility. FIFA 22 highlights: Tempo Control FIFA 22 contains a new "tempo control" feature, which lets players accelerate and decelerate instantaneously. This allows the player to perfectly time a run, defender-to-defender pass, or simple release of pressure into a tackle. This tempo control feature is present in all game modes. Match Flow The match flow has been revised to prevent players from

MyClub - Experience more moments with the world's best players as you build your dream squad, use the power of your players through Tactics, train your players through the MyPLAYER Training Centre, and manage your roster and improve your skills in a way that's never been possible before. STADIUM PREPARATION Create the ultimate experience with the most immersive stadiums in the entire franchise. Since FIFA 17, FIFA has made stadiums their main focus of attention. Over 160 new stadiums have been added to the game, ranging from small community stadiums to colossal stadiums with capacity of up to 60,000 fans. Stadia are now integral part of the game and boast thousands of different elements, from shaded areas and goal-posts to stands, floodlights, retractable roofs, ice sheets, and more. Even the smallest community stadiums now have their own teams and individual kits so you'll know exactly what your players would wear while playing at home, away or in the tournament. NEW GOALKEEPING SYSTEM Player Intelligence can also have an impact on your team's goals. FIFA has introduced the goalkeeper AI, where players can now make more intelligent decisions to allow them to save the ball and bring their team-mates into play. Shot stoppers make positioning even more crucial during a match and learning from past saves can allow the goalkeeper to predict future shots. On a technical level, ball movement will now happen at a better pace so the goalkeeper will find himself in the right position quicker, no matter which direction the ball is headed. 3D GROUND CONTENT New to FIFA 22 is the 3D ground content that takes fans on a journey into the stadiums that their team calls home. Navigate the players around the pitches, or upgrade any stadium to its final glory as your team come to life in the most immersive and authentic 3D environments in the franchise. BENCH SELECTION Review Bench Players and get the most out of your Bench.
