Q: Syncing iPhone app with Mac app I am working on an application where I need to check if the user has updated the information in the database. So if the user updates any data in the database, I want to send a notification to the mac application. What is the best way to implement this. I am relatively new to objective C. I will be using the objective C api's. A: I would either use a push notification, or, if you want to do it your own way, then you could periodically check for changes using the below sample code, and then use a BSD socket. NSString* host = @"192.168.0.101"; NSUInteger port = 80; NSData* socketData = [NSData dataWithBytes:@
